Session introduction by Kona

Kona: All right. Hi folks, it is October 12, 2026. I'm Kona Lisa Mahu with the Center for Planetary Management. We've gathered as we do this Monday. It could be morning, afternoon, or evening, depending on who you talk to on our team. We have Jacques in France, Juan in Venezuela, Evan in the Philippines, Bob will join later, I'm in New York, USA. We have done our check-in, our bonding, and it's always lovely to hear what's happening in each other's lives. And now we're headed into our meditation to get centered and grounded, and see if we have a message from our wonderful celestial team. So, Jacques, please lead us in that meditation. Thank you.

Centering moment as a Team by Jacques

Jacques: Thank you, Kona. Good morning, good evening to the team, wherever we are placed around the world. Before we work on the magazine, please relax. Relax your body, relax all your muscles. Breathe slowly, breathe in … out. As the team has said during the check-in, we are all more or less a little bit tired and weak these days. We don't know if it's the energy around, but we need to rest, we need to relax, and we need to receive this beam of light from the center of the universe, from our Paradise Father coming to our crown chakra, through all our chakras down to the ground. With that, we are connected to the universe via this beam of light healing us, protecting us and removing all interferences all around us.

And as human, we connect together, started by our heart line clockwise around the globe collecting those who are missing today. And we connect counterclockwise our mind line to be encircuited as one mind, one soul.

And it is time to ask the Planetary Management Team from above to join: Machiventa Melchizedek, Sondjah, Asiah, and any other Celestial Beings who want to join us today. Most of them are sometimes on the Sea of Glass with many watchers up there looking at us. And we always salute our Friends from the stellar systems, well advanced on their planet. We stay silent in this state for three minutes.

Opening Prayer by Juan

Juan: Beloved Father, once again, we are gathered here in your name, and in the name of Christ Michael, and our mother, Nebadonia, to reconnect with the spiritual world and thus be able to receive messages that may guide us toward building a better world. Thank you, Father, for giving us this great opportunity. Amen.

Jacques: Thank you, Juan, for your prayer. Welcome Bob for joining us now. And as we have two TRs today available, and as we know our Celestial Management team is always willing to give us a message, guidance. So please let it be. Whoever has a message first. Evan, do you feel something?

Evan: Okay, can I go ahead, Kona, and… I'm bringing in Monjoronson, Our Magisterial Son.

Main Addresses with Monjoronson our Magisterial Son

1. Being One with the Father Within: Monjoronson's Message of Renewal, Healing, and Co-Creative Service

Monjoronson: Good evening, good morning my Team, my Friends, my Co-Creative Workers. I am so happy to be with you today, tonight, wherever you are. I am feeling happy and optimistic because there are people like you on this planet that keeps on looking at us, being with us, working with us, for us, and for the Father.

When all this starts to happen, all this new beginning that we are waiting for, it will happen soon, my friends, because your hearts and your minds are deeply into it, as we are deeply into it, this work of the Father, this wonderful mission of Christ Michael, this wonderful assistance of our Planetary Prince [Machiventa Melchizedek] and all his Melchizedek's coming in, and all these Celestials working together with you, with us.

You cannot imagine the breadth and length of all this work, and all this … all these efforts to bring light to your world, to bring healing, to bring in something new and refreshing. As all of humanity and all mortals need to have this refreshment come. It has been a long time coming. The world, and Urantia as you know it, has been in deep despair and deep darkness because of what happened so many hundreds of years ago.

But that is all passed, and we are here now to work with you, to bring you closer to the Father, to bring everyone as close as they can get to their Thought Adjusters, to their Guides, to their Angels, to whoever they regard as their divine source. It's a very difficult time for everyone, but rest assured that these difficult times mean something. They will bring something of good, and truth and beauty to your world.

God is so much needed in the world, and you will bring that to the world. We thank you for everything that you do, and we will always be here with you to keep you of sound mind, heart, and body. Do not worry about whatever will happen in many areas of the world. These are what you would call cataclysms, or wars, or controversies. It's part of why the world will have to heal. And it will heal with all of us working together.

Thank you, my Friends. Always be one with us; that is the key: "Being one with the Father in you". Thank you, good day.

Jacques: Thank you, our Magisterial Son, Monjoronson for your supporting words, thank you so much, thank you Evan, for this beautiful message. Bob, you were on time to get the message - that's perfect, thank you so much.

And now, we see Kona as a message from Sondjah or Ashti, let's see!

Kona: Thank you, Evan, thank you, Monjoronson. I hear in my spirit that is sufficient for today, so thank you for your message.

It is, very much so, all right, very good. I'm going to pause the recording and give Bob a chance to check in. One moment.

Baptism as a Conscious Spiritual Intention: From Religious Ritual to Inner Awakening

In this discussion, Jacques shares that he recently met a woman around 40 years old who suddenly announced that she wanted to be baptized. This led the group to reflect on the meaning of baptism, especially when it is chosen consciously as an adult. Jacques wonders whether her desire is simply connected to a religious ceremony, or whether it expresses a deeper spiritual need for renewal, inner change, and a new relationship with God.

The group first compares cultural experiences of baptism. Jacques explains that in France, as in many Catholic countries, children are usually baptized as infants, before they can make a personal choice. Later, confirmation may allow a more conscious participation. Evan explains that in the Philippines, Catholic baptism is also very common, but many people participate in the rituals without deeply knowing the life and teachings of Jesus. Juan, speaking about Venezuela, explains that baptism is a very important Catholic ceremony, usually performed when children are young and often followed by a family celebration. He also remembers the baptism of his daughter as a beautiful family event.

Kona then shares her experience of being baptized as an adult. For her, baptism was a personal and conscious decision to follow Christ Jesus. It was not mainly about joining a church or obeying religious rules, but about setting her intention to live according to Jesus' example. Bob adds a similar understanding from his own adult baptism: for him, it meant choosing to follow Christ, receive His guidance, and welcome His Spirit into his life.

Juan offers a deeper spiritual reflection from a Urantia perspective. He suggests that true baptism may symbolize the moment when a human being becomes aware of divine reality and opens their heart and mind to the spiritual world. He compares this with the Urantia teaching of the soul's relationship with the Thought Adjuster, suggesting that such an inner union could one day be celebrated through a meaningful spiritual ceremony.

The group concludes that baptism, especially for an adult, can be understood as an intention-setting ceremony. The water itself is symbolic; it represents an inner decision already taking place in the person's soul. Baptism may therefore be seen as a sacred moment of renewal, dedication, and openness to God. Even infant baptism can be understood as the family's prayer that the child be protected, guided, and cared for by the heavenly family until they can make their own moral and spiritual choices.

Overall, the discussion presents baptism not merely as a religious ritual, but as a meaningful spiritual act: a conscious opening to God, a desire to follow Jesus, and a symbolic beginning of a deeper inner journey with the Divine Presence within.

Daniel Raphael's reflection on the era of the end times

Kona shares Daniel Raphael's email reflecting on the major vectors of the current era: unwinnable military conflicts, global economic stress, despotic leadership, social unrest in democratic nations, widespread anxiety, rising planetary consciousness, and the public question, "Now what?" Daniel uses the phrase "end times," but clarifies that this should not be understood as religious apocalypse or predicted destruction. Rather, it describes a natural process of social change now affecting global civilization. Kona invites the team to reframe the phrase in a way that can be safely and clearly shared with the public.

End times as the end of an old era

Kona explains that "end times" should be understood as the end of an old way of life, not the end of the world. The team discusses it as a transition away from materialistic, failing institutions toward a more spiritually grounded civilization centered on humanity, planetary good, and the seven core values. The phrase is connected to the magazine theme "Humanity at a Threshold" and the broader CPM understanding that humanity is moving through a period of becoming.

Jacques' reflection on dates, chaos, and the seven values

Jacques says he has heard many end-times predictions since the 1970s and 1980s, often tied to exact dates that proved unreliable. He agrees that the phrase should now be understood as change rather than catastrophic prediction. He observes that in France, politics, society, and education are visibly struggling, showing the need for institutional renewal. He believes the transition may take much longer than expected, and that the present team may not see the full result, but can help initiate the movement toward a world where the seven core values become the norm.

Bob and Evan on becoming and changing mindsets

Bob describes the present moment as a time of transition and becoming: humanity is becoming something better, more developed, and more sustainable. He notes that CPM is on the cusp of helping this work gain traction, though it will take time because the ideas are new to many people. Evan adds that the issue is not the end of time itself, but the end of an era. He emphasizes that old mindsets and failing systems are being exposed, and that people are being challenged to discern morality, values, and the difference between what is truly good and what no longer works.

Juan's translated reflection on the threshold

Juan says the phrase "end times" is widely used by many media, religions, and cultures. He explains that he is asking AI to help prepare an article connecting this phrase with religions, cultures, and political systems. Juan personally believes humanity is at a threshold, a point where there is no going back. The present political, economic, and social chaos shows that an old system is disintegrating and revealing its negative aspects so humanity can identify them and avoid repeating them. He sees the new world as still material, but more spiritually oriented, where the seven core values will come into operation. He adds that the team is contributing its small part to this outcome and should not focus on the negative, but continue forward without fainting, seeing the good rather than the bad.
